CONVENTION SWEEPED OFF ITS FEET AT MENTION OF CONQUERING HERO'S NAME

Most Remarkable Demonstration Ever Accorded Any Man's Name in America.

REPUBLICANS SCENT DANGER IN THE AIR.

Nomination of Bryan Made at 4:30 Yesterday Morning After All Night Session.

KERN MAY BE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Denver, Colo., July 10.—Two sessions of the Democratic national convention yesterday, the first at 11 o'clock and the second beginning at 7 o'clock last night, have advanced the work so that the platform was adopted late at night.

Bryan, Gray and Johnson were placed in nomination and after an all night session Bryan was nominated at 4:30 this morning, after which the convention adjourned.

The platform, though objectionable in some details to the conservatives of the party, must be pronounced by popular verdict less radical than was reasonably to have been expected. It enunciates no really new material propositions, at least none so new as to retain their novelty. For the most part, indeed, with but one or two exceptions it is a reaffirmation of what Democracy has heretofore declared, but the platform speaks now with emphasis, more positiveness than has usually been done.

CLAYTON CHAIRMAN.

As chairman of the committee on permanent organization, Senator McCreary, of Kentucky, presented the report of that body at the afternoon session. It recommended Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, for permanent chairman, Urey Woodson, of Kentucky, for secretary, and John I. Martin, of Missouri, as sergeant-at-arms. In all other respects the temporary organization was made permanent.

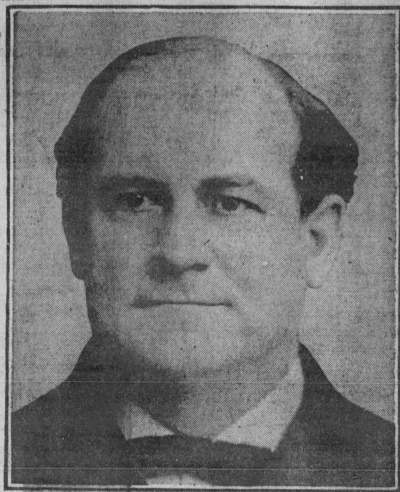

Loud cheers of approval greeted Chairman Clayton as he concluded his address upon taking the chair and the applause was continued for several minutes. The delegates stood on their chairs and tossed hats and handkerchiefs into the air.

The platform committee kept the convention waiting several hours, during which time speeches were made by Raymond Robins, of Chicago, Martin W. Littleton, of New York, and others. There was another long delay at night, waiting for the platform committee, during which speeches were made by Thos. F. Grady, of New York, M. J. Wade, of Iowa, Champ Clark, of Missouri, and others, and finally the nominating speeches were ordered before the platform was reported.

I. J. Dunn, of Chicago, nominated Mr. Bryan and there was another great demonstration and parade of banners. Gov. John A. Johnson, of Minnesota, and Judge Geo. Gray, of Delaware, were also presented. Seconding speeches were made by several orators.

The greatest demonstration ever seen in any convention was precipitated by the blind orator of Oklahoma, Senator T. P. Gore, Wednesday. It lasted 88 minutes, as compared with the manufactured demonstration to Roosevelt at Chicago, which lasted 47 minutes. It was spontaneous and continued in spite of the attempts of the speaker to proceed and the efforts of the chairman to restore order.

Wellman's Analysis.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN, FROM HIS LATEST PHOTOGRAPH.

thus analyzes the demonstration started unintentionally by Senator Gore Wednesday. Mr. Wellman is a Republican who expresses his fears rather than his wishes.

If the Senator from Oklahoma whose words roused this mighty and significant tumult is physically blind, he is nevertheless spiritually gifted with keen sight. And those who responded are not blind, save in the completeness of their faith, in the abjectness of their trust in their idealized idol. They know what they want. They know what they feel. And the blind senator, whether with artful design or lucky accident we know not, put his finger upon the very quick and raw of this battle for the presidency, for control of the government. He pointed out that the Republican candidate for president had come to Oklahoma and advised the people there not to go forward in their progressive self-government scheme; not to do that which, the senator said, lies in the very blood of the race. Then the friend of liberty came—and that reference was unmistakable in such a gathering—and counseled directly to the contrary. And the baby state, the precocious fledgling, by more than a hundred thousand majority, rejected the advice of Taft and accepted that of Bryan. Then the earthquake came.

This touches the very raw of the impending battle, because it presages the vital, the determining issue whether or not the American people can be convinced Bryan represents and typifies their progressive aspirations better than Taft; whether Bryan or Taft is the legitimate heir of Roosevelt. And this convention, young as it is, already has confirmed the accuracy of that analysis a few of us have made to the effect that the American people, by an overwhelming majority, are progressive, do want change, do want to go forward, do not want to stand still on the pretext of resting, or for anything else.

There is a minority in each party that is willing to pause for a time by the wayside. That a minority at Chicago was ineffective save in a little trimming of the platform and in the selection of the relatively unimportant assistant standard-bearer.

outburst by the sullen silence and immovability of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maine, Minnesota, Georgia and Delaware. Their emblems alone were held stubbornly and by main strength aloof from the altar of loyalty and faith and submission, though from each of these legions individuals joined in the cyclonic expression which swept the temple.

"And a little child shall lead them." It was baby Oklahoma that let loose the bolt of Jove among the sisterhood of states, that precipitated this cyclonic expression of popular hero worship, that brought on a demonstration which will make every student of American politics and of American public opinion pause for observation and reflection. And when he pauses this is the line his thoughts will take: We are a race of hero worshippers. We never have more than one or two idols at the same time. At the present every one will admit—and these two great national conventions at Chicago and Denver have demonstrated—the American people have two idols, two men who fill their eye, who represent their ideals, who typify their aspirations. One only of these is running for president this year, and here comes the burning question to all who would project the mind forward and learn what is to be the issue of the battle for the presidency: What will the people do when they find they have one hero only available? Can the popularity of the other be transferred to the man of his choice? To what extent does this idealization of public men and this resulting idolization of them control the outcome of a national election? The future only can answer.

Hero worship is to be an issue in the campaign, an important factor in its outcome. Here we see Bryan, the idol of four-fifths of his own party people. How far outside of his own party does this popularity extend? Does it run beyond the frontier and into the enemy's country? Is he more an idol now than eight or twelve years ago, when he went down to defeat? Has Rooseveltism made Bryanism stronger or weaker? Are the followers of Roosevelt going over to Bryan because they think him more like their own

March.

Hero worship has kept Bryan virile and dominant. It has placed the scepter of power in his hands among his own kind. We see here, not only this mighty demonstration in the convention hall, but in all the business and proceedings of the convention, how futile were the plots against Bryan, how hopeless the quest of the reactionary wing for a man with whom to overthrow him. In the Democracy the reaction from Parkerism to Bryanism was natural, overwhelming, complete, and it found its voice today in the thunder of human feeling, in the storm of human passion.

We have seen in both conventions that the people still rule in this land of ours. We have seen that Roosevelt's will was dominant in one, as Bryan's is in the other. We see Roosevelt naming his successor, though with more difficulty than it would have been to do as Bryan has done, name himself."

Denver, Colo., July 10, 4 p. m.—The convention reassembled this afternoon with the nomination of a vice president the only important matter to be attended to. At 4 o'clock John W. Kern, of Indiana, was placed in nomination for vice president, and will doubtless be nominated.

The nominating speeches are now being made. Thomas, of Colorado, placed in nomination Chas. A. Towne, of New York.

SWISHER FOR GOVERNOR

Nominated by Republicans of West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va., July 8.—Chas. W. Swisher, secretary of state, was nominated for governor on the first ballot by the Republican state convention tonight at 10:30 o'clock. The votes stood: Swisher, 529; Arnold C. Scherr, 175; William H. Hearne, 72, and Charles W. Dillon, 24. Four hundred and 43 votes were necessary for a choice.

Another Victim.

Gabriel Dougherty, 65 years of age, and a Union veteran, was "kicked" by a gun he fired on the Fourth of July. Peritonitis developed from his injuries and he died in Louisville yesterday morning.

TENNESSEAN FOUND DEAD

On Visit to Relatives at Laytonville When the End Came.

LEAVES SISTER HERE.

Subject to Epilepsy and Attack Probably Caused His Death.

E. Z. Ballard was found dead in bed yesterday morning at the home of Mr. J. E. Saunders in Laytonville. His home was in Robertson county, Tenn., but he had been visiting in the Purchase for some time and came to this county last Monday, after spending two weeks at Dawson, and was on a visit to his cousin, Mrs. J. E. Saunders, when the end came.

Some years ago Mr. Ballard sustained serious injuries as the result of a fall and since the accident had been a sufferer from epilepsy. The supposition is that he was attacked with a fit some time during the night. He was a brother-in-law of Mr. J. H. Stephens, of this city, and had planned to visit his sister before his return to Tennessee. He was 35 years old, unmarried and a member of the Methodist church. Funeral arrangements had not been perfected when we went to press.

MADISONVILLE $25,000 FIRE

Mayor Asks for Aid from Evansville But Aid Is Turned Back at Howell.

ONE BLOCK IS BURNED.

Flames Started in Clothing Store and Burned Business Block.

Madisonville, Ky., July 10.—Fire which broke out in the Barker's clothing store tonight at 11:15 o'clock destroyed possibly $25,000 worth of property. The origin of the blaze is a mystery, when first discovered being confined to a small room on the lower floor of the clothing house.

The fire spread with such rapidity that it was feared for a while that the local department would not be able to cope with it. A message was sent to Evansville asking the fire department for aid. Shortly before 1 o'clock it was seen that the Evansville apparatus was not needed and Mayor Vickers telegraphed to Howell to have the firemen turned back.

The Barker fire lost all their stock and the building is a complete loss. The flames spread to Slayton's furniture store, McFarland's drug store, B. L. Rosser's grocery and the Grand Leader dry goods store. However, the employees of these firms and citizens carried a large part of the stock into the streets and they will suffer little damage outside of the loss to the buildings with the exception of Slayton & Co., whose loss will be quite heavy.

PADUCAHANS

Making Long Trip In an Automobile.

Leo Keller and Fred Gilliam, of Paducah, arrived here in an automobile Thursday and left yesterday for Bowling Green and Louisville. They expect to make the entire trip in one week, the distance to be covered being 500 miles and will return to their home next Wednesday.

Delaying a Voyage.

By FRANCES TRUMBULL

Copyrighted, 1902, by Associated Literary Press

Had either Paul or Kate been less stubborn their little misunderstanding would have healed quickly, and the solitaire would have gleamed on Kate's finger instead of hiding its brilliant light in a tiny corner of the safe in Paul's office. Instead pride held away, and just to show that she did not care Kate flirted outrageously with John Trent.

Just who Trent was no one seemed to know exactly. It was said that he was looking for a site for a summer hotel which should bring prosperity to the island. Certainly he was not a team from the livery took him on many tours of the island, and during these trips Kate frequently occupied the seat of the cutter with him.

Paul Condon, whose duties held him closely at the dock, watched them speed on their way to visit some likely location, and, while he was so occupied, he wondered what the outcome would be. He neither liked nor trusted Trent, wherein he stood alone, for Trent had wormed himself into the good graces of most of the islanders. At the simple entertainments of his social life he was always the most welcome guest, while Paul, glowering in a corner and refusing to take part in any of the games suggested by Trent, found less and less sympathy as Trent's popularity grew.

It was not often that Paul attended social affairs now, urging the office as an excuse, though he had not found it difficult to leave the dock even on sailing nights when he was to act as escort to Kate. Pyrom, Her and his father owned the steamer Robert G., which made semi-weekly trips to the mainland. In winter this was about the only means of communication, for the heavy gales made the passage of the pleasure sloops almost impossible, and the stancher boats were speeded on the fishing boats. The Robert G. carried the catch across the strait to the city, and it was this traffic which made a regular communication with the mainland possible.

The sailings were scheduled for 6 o'clock, but if the fishing boats were late coming in the steamer would be held until their arrival, and the departure was long after midnight before the start was made.

This furnished Paul with the excuse he was seeking, and he was gradually in the society of the fishermen and merchants he heard little of what was going on, though Kate's increasing fondness for Trent was gossip even among the seafarers.

So completely had he isolated himself from the local gossip that he was surprised when one sailing day George Pyrom drove his daughter up to the dock and engaged passage for her across to the mainland.

"She's going to visit her Aunt Kate down to Boston," he explained as he laid down the money for a round trip ticket. "It's good for young folks to visit around a bit. I think folk to Boston would be good for you just now, Paul."

There was meaning in the tones, but Paul shook his head.

"I guess there's no chance even in Boston, captain," he declared. "I guess I've lost all on Kate."

Pyrom, unconvinced, shook his head, but he offered no further argument, and after leaving his daughter the fishing boat would be in late be stumped out of the office and on board the steamer to see that Kate was made comfortable.

It was the rule that passengers should be aboard at the announced sailing time, and when 6 o'clock came Paul locked the ticket drawer and went out on the dock to look after the fishing fleet. He studiously avoided glancing toward the after part of the steamer, where the passenger accommodations were, and he did not notice the white, wistful face pressed against the pane of one of the staterooms.

Nor did he see that the face was still there when he returned from supper and the first of the fishing fleet rolled up alongside of the dock and began to pass the barrels of fish across the dock to the steamer.

From that time on all was confusion. As rapidly as a boat could unload she gave place to another, and by midnight the last of the cargoes was stowed and the sailors began to make preparations to cast off.

Paul had gone to the gangplank to see that all was right when Trent endeavored to press past him. For a moment Paul hesitated, then reluctantly he barred the way.

"Tickets," he demanded. Trent laughed.

"I'll fix it with the purser," he assured.

"You cannot get aboard without a ticket," Paul insisted.

"Then sell me one," suggested Trent, setting down his suit case and drawing out his bill fold.

"The sale of tickets stopped at 6 o'clock," reminded Paul. "No more tickets will be sold for this voyage. You will have to wait until Thursday."

"It is vital that I should catch this boat," declared Trent. "I just happen to remember that I have an important stockholders' meeting in New York on Friday."

"You should have remembered before 6 o'clock," said Paul. "You must let me board the steamer now."

"Afraid I'm going to elope with Kate?" sneered.

"I thought that you knew she was aboard," retorted Paul. "I tell you that you can't sail."

With an oath Trent struck at his rival, but the blow was easily blocked, and the next instant Paul had Trent by the collar, dragging him away from the gangplank, and gave orders for the plank to be removed, but just as the crew grasped the ropes to carry out his command a slender figure sped across the air, moving boards and sprang between the two men.

"You must let Mr. Trent come, Paul," pleaded Kate. "I know that it is important that he should reach the mainland. Won't you please let him come?"

"Not until he explains this."

The three started at the sound of Captain Crosby's voice, and Trent made an effort to slip from his captors and spring toward the steamer, which was already slipping past the dock.

Crosby's grasp prevented the move, and Paul and Kate looked with astonishment at the suit case which had been broken open when struck by the gangplank and forced against a post. It was packed with suitcases, neckties and bonds in place of clothing.

"It looks to me as though our friend had paid a visit to the bank just before he left," commented Crosby as he extracted two revolvers from Trent's overcoat pockets. "I'm constable here, and I guess I'll put Mr. Trent where he ought to get away. He has got everybody to be down to the dock to see the steamer sail and it would be easy to get into the vault of the First National Bank."

One glance at Trent's face showed the constable's surmise to be correct, and, with a little cry, Kate waved and fell into Paul's arms.

Rapidly he bore her into the tiny office, shutting out the crowd of curious citizens, who thereupon followed Crosby and his prisoner toward the village lockup. It needed only a glass of water to revive Kate, and, with a little moan, she sat up.

"And to think that I was going to elope with the steamer!" asked Paul, looking at her. "He asked father's consent to our marriage, and father refused it. Father was sending me to Boston to forget the disappointment, and he thought that John should take the steamer at the last moment. I didn't know that—that."

"That he was going to rob the bank on his way to the steamer?" asked Paul.

"I'm not sorry for you, Kate."

"I'm not," she said, with sudden spirit. "I've been silly and stubborn. It has not only saved me from eloping with a thief, but it has shown me—"

She paused in confusion, and Paul took her in his arms.

"I have shown you that it was I, after all," he questioned.

Her look made answer, and his arms tightened protectively about the girl.

"We'll sail on the next steamer," he promised, "and it will be on my honeymoon. I guess you'll enjoy the trip more than you would have tonight's voyage."

"I'm glad I waited," assented Kate, but her glance told more than that.

How Do You Laugh?

Laughter carries good to the right kind there is something contagious, even if oneself be the cause of it. It is the product of good humor; there is nothing more wholesome than the spontaneous and whole-souled, it has a beneficial effect both on the laughter and his hearers.

But there are other kinds of laughter. Of these the sneering laugh is the most familiar. Then there is the quiet laugh—a sibilant, secretive sort of thing, which is almost invariably a sign of mischief. Another laugh, disagreeable to hear, is high pitched and nervous sounding. It is the outcome of embarrassment or merely a vocal habit.

Perhaps the worst laugh of all is the mirthless sound occasioned by the distress or embarrassment of others, and it invariably wounds most the heart of it. A person who has been thus laughed at and hurt is never likely to forget the experience—Liverpool Mercury.

Chinese Parental Authority.

A remarkable event occurred at Tsingkiangpu. A man by the name of King had a son who made his father and mother "worse" because he was a bad, rakish life he led. He gambled, loafed, smoked opium, etc. If he stole, his father would be taken to the yamen, and the whole family would be disgraced for the son's villainy, and the vital question was, How could the family be protected? At last they arrived at the conclusion that the only way to protect the father and mother was to take extreme measures with the son, which they did with a vengeance. The father and uncle took him out among the graves, followed by a crowd of curious neighbors and friends, and putting a rope around his neck, each pulled on an end, and the son was put beyond reaching in a family in this world—North China Herald.

Right For Ones.

In an argument on modern philanthropy, of which as it is usually conducted he disapproves, a university professor had for opponent a charity expert.

In the argument's course the expert pointed out a case where his society, stepping in with financial aid, unquestionably saved the lives of an entire family.

"Now, what do you say to that?" the expert triumphantly demanded.

"Oh," grumbled the professor, "even modern philanthropy will do good sometimes. It is like the case of a west side Mrs. Malaprop. The rain fell in."

Many VICTIMS OF GLORIOUS FOURTH.

Annual Celebration costs More Lives Than Did any Battle of the Revolution.

More people are killed in the United States every year through Fourth of July celebrations than were killed in any battle of the Revolutionary war, and the total number of casualties of Fourth of July celebrations during the last four years is more than double the total losses of the Americans during the eight years of the Revolutionary war, according to statements contained in an article, entitled "The Glorious Fourth," in National Food Magazine.

The magazine gives a table of comparisons, showing the losses in the battles of the Revolutionary war compared with the total casualties of all the Fourth of July celebrations since 1903, and says:

Every Fourth of July more people in the United States are killed in celebrating our independence than were killed in the bloodiest battle of the Revolutionary war. The killed and injured during the last Fourth of July were nearly ten times as great as were the American losses at Bunker Hill; it was fifty times as great as at the combined battles of Lexington and Concord, more than sixty times that of our losses at Bennington, over seven times the Americans losses at Germantown, more than four times the number of our soldiers, killed, wounded and imprisoned at the battle of Brandywine and more than twice as great as all the losses of the American army sustained at Camden.

"The list is nearly seven times that of the number of British killed and wounded at King's Mountain; it is eight times as many as the American losses at Bataul Springs; more than ten times our losses at Guilford Courthouse, and more than sixty-two times as great as our losses at Cowpens."

"If these comparisons are not sufficiently convincing to prove the horror and destructiveness of our Fourth of July celebrations, then combine both the British and American losses of the bloodiest battles of the Revolution and multiply that by two, and even then you will have to add more to equal the figures of the total casualties of our present day Fourth of July celebrations. And then, if that comparison is not sufficiently convincing, the statistics demonstrate that the casualties of every Fourth of July are greater than the total number of both British and American soldiers engaged in most of the battles of the Revolutionary War."

"It should be remembered that the losses in the battles mentioned include the killed, wounded and the number of prisoners taken."

"Other comparisons might be given by citing the battle of Germantown, where the Americans lost 1,000 and the British 600; Lexington and Concord, where the American loss was 2,000; King's Mountain, at which the British lost 456 killed and wounded and 648 prisoners; Bennington, where the British lost 850 and the Americans 70."

stands a tower of strength like the last of the Mohicans, which he is, time does not state the wonderful power of the most facile and brilliant newspaper pen in America. In age, passed the three score mark, bearing the brunt of many hard fought battle, he has not lost the zest of youth or the vigor and perspicuity of his young manhood. He seems rather to be seasoned with age without any of its infirmities. In the campaign that is before us he gives promise to be as vigorous and useful as in 1876 when he was universally conceded to be the great leader of public thought. Two of his recent editorials, one on "Taft, the man of straw," and the other on Judge Parker and the Cleveland incident at Denver almost lead us to exclaim, never man wrote like this man wrote. He has made his mistakes of them, from our standpoint terrible blunders, but with all he is the most brilliant and greatest editorial writer in America. Halstead, Dana, Grady, Greeley and McClure have all gone, but we are glad that Henry Watterson, the greatest of them all is left and that like the last of the Mohicans he stands a power of strength for Democracy—Elizabethtown News.

PARIS ATE 50,000 HORSES

That Was the Number Last Year, Including Mules and Donkeys

Although less meat was eaten in Paris last year than for a number of years preceding the consumption of horse meat is on a steady increase. Paris has always set the fashion to the rest of the world in gastronomic affairs as well as in the matter of women's attire. Foreigners residing in France are asking themselves whether Parisians will carry their love of horseflesh into the restaurant and dining room, says a Paris letter.

A little less than 50,000 horses, mules and donkeys were eaten in Paris alone last year. This is the proportion: For every hundred animals butchered at the hippodromes there are ninety-seven horses, two donkeys and one mule. Last year the sum total represented twenty-five million pounds of meat. Many Americans and Englishmen have become quite fond of horse-meat since their residence in Paris. It is said to be much more nutritious than beef and is recommended by all Paris physicians for convalescents and consumptives.

The taste is not very different from that of beef. In fact, a man can eat a horse-meat and never know the difference. The abattoirs where these animals are butchered are closely supervised by the city, and only healthy animals are slain.

Mrs. W. C. Davis, 829 West Seventh Street, Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "Mr. Davis has never had any occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since he recommended them in the summer of 1903. For years prior to that time he had been an almost constant sufferer from kidney trouble. He had intense pains in his back which extended to his shoulders and annoyed him all day. They prevented him from sleeping during the night. The relief he obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, which he got at L. A. Johnson & Co's. drug store was surprising. They acted differently from any remedy he ever tried and he has never had a recurrence of the trouble since using this valuable remedy four years ago. It speaks pretty strongly for Doan's Kidney Pills that cured him."

The sudden death of Murat Halstead at his home in Cincinnati, marked the passage of a national figure in journalism and letters. He was undoubtedly one of the greatest editorial writers in the country ever produced and during the Civil war and for twenty years thereafter he wielded a far reaching influence through his editorial utterances. The death of Halstead leaves Henry Watterson as the last of the Mohicans. Charles Dana, Horace Greeley, Alexander McClure, Henry Grady the other great editorial writers have long since passed away. They with Halstead were all contemporaries with Henry Watterson and there are no men coming on the scene of action who can properly be put in their class editorial writers. But for the pen of Watterson we

GOOD MAN IS GUDE.

Norwegian Minister a Famous Diplomat With Beautiful Wife.

Ove Gude, the new minister sent to represent the Norwegian government in the United States, is distinctly a notable personage aside from his prominence as a statesman. He is a son of Prof. Gude, the famous Norwegian landscape and marine artist, and has inherited much of his father's skill with the brush. Minister Gude has charmed the nobility of England, France, Denmark and Italy with his wonderful voice, and is said to be one of the best singers of Norwegian folk songs. Finally, it may be noted, he speaks seven or eight languages fluently. Minister Gude has been in the diplomatic service for 30 years, and has served at all the leading European capitals, as well as in China and Japan.

Madame Gude will vie with Baroness Sternberg for recognition as the most beautiful woman in official life at the national capital. Madame Gude is a Danish woman, the daughter of one of Denmark's most famous military leaders, and is much younger than her husband, whose second wife she is. Indeed, she might almost be accounted a bride, for Minister Gude met and married her only four years ago.

Toboggan Elopement.

An elopement by bob sleigh occurred at Blaine last winter, where a young Swain, forbidden to visit his sweetheart's house, carried off the girl by an ingenious ruse. The girl persuaded her parents to accompany her up the mountain route of Elyard to watch the tobogganing. Halfway up shouts of warning were heard, a sleigh came tearing down, and every one ran to the side of the course. The girl alone stood still. The lover and his friends, who were on the sleigh, slackened speed, caught the girl in their arms and dashed down to the bottom of the run. There the lovers caught a train to Basie, where their marriage took place immediately, and every one was as helpless, as she is of age.

HENDERSON, COUNTY.

The Weather.

FOR KENTUCKY—Generally fair and continued warm Saturday.

Frank H. Hitchcock has been chosen chairman of the Republican national committee.

The Hitch family held a reunion in Pendleton county last week and 110 descendants were present. It is to be hoped that none of the boys was Hitched on the outside.

Evan Ragland, who recently purchased the Springfield, Tenn. Record, has disposed of same to A. Thomas for a fancy profit. We are not advised as to Ragland's future business.—Auburn Advocate.

To Wed In August.

Dr. W. S. Petrie and wife, of Fairview, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Annie Mae, to Mr. Vernon H. Petrie, of Manila, P. I. The wedding will occur at Fairview Aug. 19. The groom-to-be is a son of Mr. F. G. Petrie, of this city, and is now on a visit to his parents.

Story Lacks Confirmation.

Investigation of a report that scraps of iron were placed in Wm. Harrison's wheat near Carl, to attempt to wreck a thresher operated by Bud Dukes, fails to justify attaching importance to the report. If iron scraps were found, they were probably there by accident.

Thomas F. Watson was formally notified in Atlanta last night of his nomination for President by the Populists of the United States. Mr. Watson delivered a lengthy address.

Editor Killed

A. L. McCann, editor of the Mount Olive (Miss) Progress, was shot and killed by A. C. Brett, agent for the Southern Express Company.

French Bridge Horror.

A new bridge under construction over the Rhine at Cologne fell in and many of the workmen engaged on the structure lost their lives.

The negroes who were run out of Birmingham, in Marshal county, last March, now claiming Illinois as their home, have brought suit at Paducah in the Federal Court, against 75 or 80 members of the mob for $75,000 damages. Most of the men sued are already under indictment and the leader is in the penitentiary. Some of the defendants are men of means. The names are withheld.

Ben Armistead, of the wall paper department of the Forbes Manufacturing Co., will go to Montgomery about August 15th and will be succeeded in his department by Robt. H. Whitlow, now with Hopper & Kitchen.

D. Y. Keith, who has been attending Louisville Hospital Medical College, is here to spend his vacation.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BURGESS HELD

In Jail Awaiting Requisition Papers.

The case of J. M. Burgess, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, and arrested here on a warrant from Mississippi, came up before Judge Cook yesterday on habeas corpus proceeding. The Court dismissed the writ and the prisoner was sent back to jail. Requisition papers are expected to-day or tomorrow.

White-Forbes.

Jas. A. White and Miss Carrie Forbes, popular young people of northeast Christian, were married Wednesday night at the home of the bride.

Reducing Fat on a Full Meal

If you want to reduce your flesh a pound a day, say, and still are averse to exercising or cutting down your meals—from three to one or half of one—you can manage it. Ask your druggist for a package of Marmola Prescription Tablets; they cost but a trifle (an effective quantity being obtainable for only 75 cents.) and take one tablet after meals and at bedtime. That is all. Just eat when and what you please, leave exercising to the athletes, take your convenient little tablet faithfully and that fatty flesh will soon disappear—possibly at the rate of a pound or more a day.

These tablets are licensed as harmless and effective by the Marmola Co., Detroit, Mich., for they contain identically the same ingredients as the famous Marmola Prescription; 1/2 ounce Marmola, 1/2 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 2 1/2 ounces Sirup Simplex, which as everybody knows is put up regularly and recommended by every druggist in the land.

Democratic Handbook.

The Democratic Handbook, gotten out by the Congressional Committee, is composed nearly entirely of extracts from the Congressional Record, which fully convicts the party in power of extravagance and an utter disregard of the people's rights. In the chapter on Currency Reform a speech of Hon. Wm. J. Bryan Feb. 17, 1908, is included. There are speeches by many of the Democratic leaders in the House and Senate. The book sells for 25 cents, which goes to help defray the cost of publication.

The book is one that should be in the hands of every Democrat who wants to know what the party stands for in the present campaign. Jas. F. Lloyd, Chairman Democratic Congressional Committee, Washington, D. C., will fill orders.

The State University Lexington, Ky.

The State University, Lexington, Kentucky, offers the following courses, namely, Agricultural, Mechanical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mining Engineering, Classical and seven Scientific courses each of which extends over four years and leads to a Bachelor's degree; also a Department of Law and a Department of Education, which last has been established instead of the Normal School. Persons who enter this department prepare for advanced work in pedagogy and are granted a Bachelor's degree in this subject when completed. The Academy for preparatory instruction is retained.

County appointees receive free tuition, privilege of residence in the dormitories, fuel and light, traveling expenses, if they remain ten consecutive months, or one collegiate year.

The laboratories and museums are large, well equipped, comprehensive and modern. Military Science is fully provided for as required by Congress.

The graduates in the several courses of study readily find employment with liberal remuneration. The total number of matriculates for last year was 1078. Each department has a specialist at its head, with the necessary number of assistants.

Young women find an excellent home, with board and lodging, in Patterson Hall, which is well equipped with all the modern conveniences, bathroom, hall for physical culture, at $3.00 per week. All courses of study in the University are open to women on identical conditions with those applying to males.

The completion of the Agricultural, Mining Engineering Laboratory and Education buildings afford ample and commodious quarters for these departments, which are rapidly increasing in number of matriculates.

PEARY DEPARTS.

Off for Cape Breton to Hunt For the Pole.

New York, July 9.—Confident that his quest for the North Pole will be successful, Commander Robert E. Peary left for Sydney, C. B., where he will join his Arctic steamer, the Roosevelt, which left here Monday on the long journey to the Northern ice fields. Before his departure the Arctic explorer thanked the press for its aid and support in his efforts to reach 90 degrees north. He said:

"I sincerely appreciate the interest and friendly attitude of the press throughout the entire country. This moral support has distinctly helped in carrying me past the numerous dead centers of weariness and discouragement that have occurred in my efforts to secure the necessary funds for this expedition."

MRS. NANCY GROVES,

BRILLIANT RECEPTION

In Honor of Visiting Young Ladies.

Miss Ruth Dietrich entertained Wednesday evening in honor of her guests, Misses Mary Phillips, of Bowling Green, and Melvin Akin, of Princeton; and Misses Emma Noe and Katie Means, of this city. The beautiful lawn and large colonial porch were lighted and decorated and the happy party, in and out of the house, enjoyed the evening to the fullest extent. The refreshments were elegant and delicious and the occasion was enlivened by sweet strains of music by Lebkuecher's orchestra. It was one of the most brilliant social events of the season and the attendance was large. All took away happy memories of a delightful evening.

LOOSE COWS

Must Be Controlled Or Owners May Be Fined.

The stock law is being violated unintentionally by many people who entrust their milk cows to boys who are not responsible. While playing along the streets, the cows are allowed to get on the sidewalks or cross into the lawns of the police. The police will enforce the law more rigidly and may require all cows taken through the city to be led by halters. Owners are liable to a fine if their cows are turned loose in the streets, unless in charge of a responsible person who will keep them from doing damage to other people's property.

ANNUAL REUNION

Second Brigade, Ky. D. U. C. V. at Owensboro.

The annual reunion of the Second Brigade, Kentucky Division United Confederate Veterans, will be held in Owensboro on July 30 and 31. The Confederate organizations of that city and the people of Daviess county generally are preparing to entertain, not only the Confederate Veterans, their Sons and Daughters, but all the friends of the organization and cause who can attend. The reunion proper will be held at Hickman park, in a magnificent grove. The camp fires will be lighted at the Daviess county armory, a building sufficiently commodious to accommodate the main body of the reunion, should the weather be unfavorable. The transportation committee of Rice E. Graves camp has secured a rate, on all the railroads, of one and one third fare plus twenty-five cents, for the round trip, and a flat one and one third fare rate on all steamboat lines. Tickets will be sold on July 29 and 30 and will be good for return until midnight of August 3.

"DRYS" WON

In Election On Liquor Question at Madisonville.

The vote on the liquor question in Madisonville Wednesday resulted in a victory for the "drys," the majority being 37. The total vote cast was 1,155. The result of the vote will not close any of the saloons of the city for about one year, as nearly all of the saloon men renewed their license several days ago.

STRANGE NEGRO

Is Wanted at Mannington for Attempted Assault.

Proof is inexhaustible that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carries women safely through the Change of Life.

Read the letter Mrs. E. Hanson, 304 E. Long St., Columbus, Ohio, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was passing through the Change of Life, and suffered from nervousness, headaches, and other annoying symptoms. My doctor told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good for me, and since taking it I feel so much better, and I can again do my own work. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me during this trying period."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

 rubber bands, one and a half tons of nails, 5,000 gallons of oil, over 100 tons of metal for composing machines, nearly $50,000 worth of book cloth and golf leaf to the amount of $18,000. The lead pencils used in the office, if laid end to end, would reach about three miles. An item for washing $225,000 towels in the

CRUSADE ON INSANITY

Result of Phipps Gift to Johns Hopkins University.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS AS CLINICS

Experts Will Watch Effects of Strenuous Life on Children and Will Cure Out Inpatient Cases—Free Preventive Treatment to Be Given.

The gift by Henry Phipps, the steel magnate of Pittsburg, of $500,000 to Johns Hopkins university for the study of insanity and for the more careful treatment of insane patients will probably have the effect of starting a wholesale crusade against insanity, according to the opinion recently expressed by a Washington correspondent of the New York Times by Dr.
 William A. White, superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane at Washington. The crusade, which Mr. Phipps' large donation has made possible, will not rest content with the establishment of a regular clinic in connection with the university hospital. As explained by Dr.
 White, the diagnosis of insanity is already on a scientific basis, as much so as other branches of medicine. The radical departure that will now be inaugurated will be seeking out and careful treatment of the sufferers to treatment of a preventive nature.

The public schools will be thoroughly overhauled for this purpose. Just as now the school is used as a central point for forcing the children to undergo vaccination, so the next few schools used as a rallying point against the first germs of insanity.

As formerly specified in the deed of gift, the bequest will be utilized in establishing an additional ward at Johns Hopkins university. These special treatment will be provided for the patients in the earlier stages of insanity.

The next step which is contemplated in accord with the general plan of the gift is to go back to the causes of insanity. Here nothing could be accomplished without recourse to the public schools. Not only will the patients in need of treatment for the early stages of mental disease be supplied from the schools, free treatment being offered the parents of afflicted children, but to will become clinics on a larger scale than would be possible in any hospital.

Here the effects of nervous diseases and their gradual growth into more serious cases of mental disturbance will be watched, and a careful selective process will be made possible to the officers in charge of the work.
 Children who show signs of undue morbidness or shyness, who have become "high strung" from efforts to surpass their classmates in their studies, will come under the direct attention of trained medical experts.

Under this new system it will be possible to study the effect of the strenuous life on the young. The universal criticism that has been directed at public schools for unduly forcing children into premature study of Latin, Greek and mathematics has already directed the attention of scientists to this quarter.

The erection of the new ward at the hospital will make it possible for cases that want it—and the experts intend to take up the treatment of cases as soon as the signs are definitely diagnosed—to be brought at once under systematic treatment.

Since the treatment will be free, patients may be induced to take it who otherwise would be set down as merely "queer" and allowed to get along by themselves. This phase of the crusade is expected to put an enormous amount of data concerning the disease at the command of medical men.

The field opened up in the schools
 by this crusade is an enormous one, and the authorities do not expect to get it thoroughly systematized for several years.

The method to be pursued in this second phase of the crusade will consist in all the possible ways of popularizing the results of scientific investigation. Every effort will be made to interest parents in the subject, and information for the use of teachers and nurses will be scattered broadcast.

Under this head plans are already being formulated for a series of public lectures on the symptoms of insanity, the treatment of the disease and the methods of preventing the growth of morbid or abnormal tendencies in children. These lectures as time goes on will assume the proportions of "chautauquas of health," and a knowledge of the earlier forms of mental weakness will be as generally known and discussed in homes as are the ordinary run of children's sicknesses.

Lemon Bath a Beautifying Device.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has adopted a custom from the Dutch is dies, and everybody is once more admiring her majesty's fair skin and its satin-like softness, says a dispatch from The Hague. Wilhelmina confesses that it is probably due to the lemon baths she has been taking for the past few months upon the advice of the wife of one of her colonial governors.
 The lemon bath is made as follows:
 Five lemons, cut into slices, are left to soak in a basin of water for half an hour. After the water has been drawn from the faucet the lemon water is added and the whole stirred vigorously. The bath is a great invigorator and excellent cleanser and has a most soothing, refreshing and softening influence on the skin.

SELDOM, if ever, in the history of warfare has the leader of a lost cause received the commendation from his foes that has been accorded by the north to Robert E.

Even though the cause itself failed, this in itself is success. To defeat a cause of wickedness, to reduce it through adversity, is in a personal sense to triumph.

The crisis in General Lee's life came in the outbreak of the war. He himself was opposed to the seceding movement, but when that movement decided to cast his lot with his state, he became the impartial historian may find in this act a sophistry, but he must quit Lee of selfish motive, even though he may detect a flaw in his reasoning, for it seems indisputable that Lee was offered a position of great influence and power about Washington.

Even though the cause itself was just, Lee was not moved to great distress by bitter animosity, to resent sweet through triumph, is a personal sense to triumph.

The crisis in General Lee's life came in 1861. He him- self was opposed to the seceding move- ment, but when that movement came, he decided to cast his lot with his state. He was in this act a supplanter, but he must acquit Lee of selfish motive, even though he may detect a flaw in his reasoning, for it seems indisputable that the Federal forces about Washington had no selfish reason for taking the opposite course from that which he took.

At the beginning of his life, in all his early years, General Lee was of ordinary fortune. His birth was of the best, he being the son of "Light Horse" Harry Lee, a famous cavalier.

His was a splendid education. He was second in his class at West- point. He was married to a Custis- child in this far was connected with the aristocracy of the South. His wife was handsome and of commanding appearance. His disposition was amiable, his manner polished, his bearing grandly. He gained special distinction in the Mexican War. His domestic life was spotless.

Lee was especially popular with his own people. Few leaders have been more loved. It is remarkable that his private life was so pure and high enough to stand a suggestion. He took no part in the acrimonious discussions relating to the conduct of the war, but assumed responsibility for an innocent, were such. He was great in defeat and advised the south to accept the results of the war without murmur. Then he accepted the presidency of a university and gave his last year of that work.

Completed at Vermont Quarry and Ready to Ship.

The $15,000 monument to be erected in the Frankfort cemetery over the grave of the late William Goebel was at last been completed. The firm of William Adams & Son, contractors of this city, have received word from Barry, Vt., that the monument, just completed of Barry granite at the quarry there, is now ready for shipment. It will require several freight cars to transport the ponderous stones comprising the base to Kentucky. The statue, which is to surmount it and which is a heroic figure of Goebel about ten feet high, was finished some time ago in New York, by Niehaus, the sculptor, and is been awaiting the completion of granite monument before shipment from New York. Both the monument and statue will reach Frankfurt within the next thirty days. Upon their arrival there, they will be placed in position in the cemetery and the Goebel Monument Commission called together to inspect the work and arrange the details.

granite monument before shipment from New York. Both the monument and statue will reach the state capitol within the next thirty days. Upon their arrival there, they will be placed in position in the cemetery and the Goebel Monument commission called together to indicate the work and arrange the dates for the unveiling ceremonies. No determination has been given when the unveiling will take place, but it will probably not be until fall, and perhaps not until the next year.

Goebel died in February, 1902, and Senator James B. McCreary, who is now in Denver attending the National Democratic Convention, is chairman of the Goebel Monument commission and it develops upon him to call a meeting of the commission to view the monument where it is set up. Sculptor Nelhaus, who executed the statue for this monument, also has the contract for the Goebel statue to be erected in the capitol grounds at St. Louis, Mo., which the last Legislature of the Beckham administration appropriated $25,000—Lexington, Ky.

LAWYERS HAVE FUN

Have Picnic In Cave, Music Speeches and Moot Court.

The annual picnic, of the Hopkinsville Bar Association, was given at Campbell's Cave Thursday and several hours of fun was afforded all who attended. There was music by the "Famous Quintette," speeches by everybody present and a dinner of barbecued mutton and shoat and other good edibles. After dinner Moses L. Elb was arrested on a charge of eating hog meat. A court was organized to try the case and the trial occupied more than an hour, and turned out to be a hard fought legal battle. John Stites and C. R. Clark were attorneys for the prosecution and Mr. Elb was ably defended by Denny P. Smith and W. T. Fowler. Chas. M. Meacham was elected special judge to preside in the case. A jury of twelve men, most of them lawyers, was empaneled. Witnesses for the prosecution testified to the fact that the prisoner was a Jew and that he had eaten a portion of the barbecued hog on the bill of fare. His defense was that he had been "weighed" into eating the shoat by one of the prosecuting attorneys, who assured him it was mutton. Able and eloquent speeches were made; Mr. Clark especially distinguished himself in an oratorical outburst that surprised his best friends and caused applause in which the jury joined. The court instructed the jury to find Mr. Elb guilty, but to give him the benefit of mitigating circumstances. The jury of which John C. Duffy was foreman returned the following verdict:

"We find the defendant guilty of being both a Jew and a gentleman and fix his punishment at a supper to be given to the jury."

After the court adjourned there was a ceaseless flow of oratory until about four o'clock when the entertainment broke up with songs by the choir; Clark, Wicks, Smith, Tibbs and Stites. Those present were: W. F. Winfree, Hunter Wood, Sr.,

Jr., W. H. Southall, Walter Knight, W. T. Fowler, J. T. Edmunds, J. H. Linton, Jno. E. Byars, S. Y. Trimble and Frank Rives. Also as guests, Jno. P. Prowse, H. W. Tibbs, C. R. Clark, Feland Clark, David Smith, W. R. Wicks, W. W. Johnson, Jouett Henry, M. L. Elb, Jno. M. Renshaw, Edgar Renshaw, W. R. Bowles, Hancock Higgins, A. W. Wood, T. J. McReynolds, L. H. Davis, W. T.
